

SHERIDAN, WYOMING

Howdy %%FIRST:Partner%%

Since its completion in 1913, Trail End – now the Trail End State Historic Site –has greeted thousands of visitors, from family and friends to school children and international tourists.

Built by cowboy-turned-politician John B. Kendrick, Trail End displays an elegantly different aspect of both Wyoming's colorful ranching history and Sheridan's rich western heritage. For modern day visitors, Trail End offers a fun and educational experience, while touring the mansion.

The Trail End is now open for its twenty-seventh visitation season. The historic site, which was a Sheridan landmark long before it opened as a state property in 1982, examines life in Sheridan during the years 1913 to 1933, mostly through the eyes of its original owners, the Kendrick family.

New at Trail End this year is a whole-house exhibit entitled "Wedding Belles & Beaux: Sixty Years of Wedding Costumes & Customs, 1869-1929."
